STIMSON PLAN DISAPPOINTING TO CONGRESS

Leaders of Both Parties Express Hope It Will Lead to New Accord

HALTS COMPETITION

Senate Leaders Believe Any Treaty Will Be Ratified by Upper House

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8—While a wave of disappointment swept congress over the Stimson proposal for naval limitation, leaders of both major parties today expressed a hope the American plan would lead to a new naval accord at London.

The Stimson plan, was described as valuable chiefly because it would eliminate naval competition for a definite period between the five great naval powers. This approbation was somewhat tempered by implied criticism that the plan would fail real reduction in naval armaments and would increase the cost of the American navy to the people of the United States.

The view of administration leaders was expressed by Rep. Burton L. French, Republican of Idaho, who commands the appropriations subcommittee dealing with naval appropriations.

"The effect of the program would not mean substantial reduction in money cost to the American people but would check further expansions," said French. "Such a program would remove competition in different types of craft, which, in itself, is fundamental."

Senate leaders however, expressed a belief that any treaty, growing out of the Stimson plan, would be ratified by the upper branch of congress. Senator William E. Borah, Republican of Idaho, chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, indicated only a half-hearted approval of the Stimson plan.

Wide Difference Seen on Aircraft Carriers

LONDON, Feb. 8—While Premier Ramsay MacDonald's statement outlining Great Britain's aims and plans for naval limitation was viewed today as being generally complete accord with American views on limitation, it revealed wide Anglo-American differences on the question of aircraft carriers.

Premier MacDonald proposed that the maximum aircraft carrier tonnage for the United States and Great Britain, placed at 135,000 tons at the Washington conference of 1921-1922, should be reduced to 100,000 tons.

This proposal is likely to cause a stir of resentment in the "big navy" blocs in the United State senate and house of representatives for such a reduction would stringhalter the United States and make the American navy decidedly inferior to the British navy in the aircraft carrier category for the next 17 years.

FIVE YOUTHS HURT IN URBANA CRASH

Secretary Charged with Driving While Drunk

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8—Samuel R. Young, lawyer and secretary to one of congress prohibitionists, Rep. Percy E. Quin, democrate of McComb, Miss., today was awaiting trail in police court on a charge of operating an automobile while drunk.

Local Teacher Is Author of Festival Dance-Drama

This Year's May Production at Harding High School Personally Arranged by Miss McAfee; Is Allegory Titled "Into the Light," To Be Given at Grand Theater

May Festivals, under the direction of Miss Rachel McAfee, physical culture director, have come to be regarded as biennial affairs at the high school. This year, the festival will be a dance-drama, arranged and written by Miss McAfee. This is the first year that she has written one of her productions.

The May Queen, her maid-of-honor and four attendants, Miss Nadine Knachel, Miss Donna Riley, Miss Laura Wood, and Miss Violet Bell, were elected from the senior girls' gym class of 35 members. This senior class was organized several years ago into the Kinesian club. All sophomore and junior girls and the 35 Kinesian club girls were privileged to vote for the May Queen and her maid-of-honor and four attendants.

Will Present Allegory

A definite date for the presentation of the allegory, "Into the Light," has not been set, although it will be given early in May at the Grand theater.

Differing from preceding May Festivals, a reader will give the setting for the presentation. It is written in four episodes and concerns the tale of "The Kingdom of Discord," and its people, smitten by the merciless hand of a tyrant. Poverty stalks among them; Anguish born of present oppression and Terror of the future pervade them. Murmuring, threatening, the people of the kingdom seek a way out while Prejudice, Hatred and Greed, the offspring of Cruelty, infect their souls. Desperate conditions demand desperate measures and at length, throwing off the shackles of Slavery, they make a vain attempt to crash the palace gates and destroy the Oppressor. The penalty is Exile.

Overtaken by Disaster

The allegory moves through the second episode in which Famine and Death overtake this band of Exiles. Starvation and Cold are everywhere. One soul has found no release in Death, while Life still flames within him. As the episode closes, he has staggered forth in search of Peace.

He finds the path to Peace is long and hard, as the third episode progresses. Recognizing at length that his way has been wrong, he prays for guidance. And the Spirit of Truth is the answer to Prayer.

In the closing episode, set in the Garden of Heart's desire, the Spirit of Truth leads the young man to all the beauty of nature, presenting one by one all its exquisite treasures. He has found that not through Prejudice, not through Hatred is Happiness to be found. Bitter hardship has purged his soul and brought him to Prayer for guidance. He finds Peace in Righteousness.

This is undoubtedly one of the most ambitious efforts on the part of Miss McAfee for the gym presentations. All of the dancing will be in natural rhythm.

Mr. Eaton recently organized the Republic Steel Corp., which has total combined resources of about $250,000,000, and is the third largest steel company in the United States. Eaton is also an important figure in several important public utility, coal, iron, oil, transportation and commercial enterprises.

TRANSFER PLAN APPROVAL DUE

Prohibition Enforcement To Be Turned Over to Justice Department

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8—The first proposal of the Wickersham law enforcement commission for reorganization of federal prohibition enforcement machinery was slated for overwhelming approval in the house today with passage of the Williamson bill transferring the prohibition bureau from the treasury to the justice department.

Meanwhile the second plan of the crime commission creating commissioners' courts to deal with petty violations, was being revised by house drys. The third major proposal, creating a unified border control, was still being considered by the treasury.

Administration leaders were confident the transfer bill would be approved by senate as well as by house but other measures faced an uncertain future in the present session.

Despite dissension in the house over the extent to which the treasury should be stripped of power over industrial alcohol, leaders predicted passage of the bill as endorsed by the administration.

Under its terms all dry agents would be placed under the attorney-general, who also would be given joint authority to write the treasury's industrial alcohol regulations, and power to veto a permit because of law violations.

HAMILTON, Feb. 8—Mrs. Myrtle Boulie, 28, of Dayton, was killed and her body was burned to a crisp, and two others were seriously injured when the automobile in which they were riding, failed to negotiate a curve on the Dayton-Cincinnati pike and crashed off a telephone pole at Bethany, near here today.

VOTES FOR CONTROL OF GERMAN SALOONS

Committee of Reichstag Would Ration Drinking Establishments

BERLIN, Feb. 8—The first definite step toward liquor-drinking control in Germany was taken by the economic committee of the reichstag today.

The committee voted in favor of "rationing" saloons on a basis of one to each 400 inhabitants.

Should the reichstag sustain the decision of the economic committee, it would mean the elimination of some 70,000 saloons throughout Germany, as the present proportion is far in excess of one to 400.

Opponents of the proposed ration law bitterly resent any restriction on the number of saloons, charging it foreshadows the advent of prohibition in this country.

HOOVER LEAVES TONIGHT FOR FLORIDA TRIP

President and Wife Will Spend Week at Deep-Sea Fishing

CHARTER HOUSEBOAT

Party Due at Long Key Early Monday; Executive's First Vacation

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8—President Hoover sets out today to reward himself with a brief respite from the cares of office after 11 months of unbroken labor.

Tonight, he and Mrs. Hoover and a very small party of intimate friends entrain for the southern tip of Florida, there to put in a week at deep-sea fishing.

Long Key, a fishing camp located midway between Miami and Key West will be their base, but they will remain for the most part on a small yellow off shore capping the reef completely private they have had since inauguration.

The party is due to arrive at Long Key early Monday, and will immediately board the houseboat Sanderea, chartered by the president for the occasion from his friend, Jeremiah Millbank.

This is the same boat the Hoovers used last winter when they spent a month in Florida just prior to March 4. Two other smaller houseboats will be waiting for the secret service, and this tiny fleet will promptly sail out to isolation and the fishing grounds.

PREDICTS "SPOT" FOR INSPECTOR HIMSELF

Detroit Man "Tells All" About Attack on Garvin Last Month

DETROIT, Feb. 8—Early and violent death at the hands of gangsters was prophesied both for himself and for Inspector Henry J. Garvin today by Adolph Van Coppenolle.

Van Coppenolle excited to die because he "told all" before the police trial board yesterday. He told about Moran gangsters from Chicago and Legan's cats from St. Louis who, he said, were the gunmen who tried to "bump off" Garvin Jan. 2.

He expects to die despite the fact that a police guard escorts him to and from a hiding place downtown and another police detail guards his wife, his two small children and his 70-year-old mother at their home.

He expects Garvin to die because, he says, Garvin double crossed the gangsters who kidnaped and killed David Cass and kidnaped but did not kill Fred Bugsman.

Garvin had planned to leave town today. "My doctor told me I had to get away from it all and go out to the wood and rest," he said. "I can't sleep. I can't rest."

VICTIMS REBEL AND BEAT HOLDUP PAIR

Five Clevelanders Pounce on Gunmen and Send Them to Hospital

CLEVELAND, Feb. 8—Revolting against the holdup attempt of two gunmen, five intended victims pounced on the pair and handed them a sound beating here early today. The two gunmen, bruised and battered, were taken to a hospital for treatment.

The robbers entered a southeast Cleveland pharmacy early today and stuck up five victims. As one of the robbers opened the cash drawer, Howard Perlich, proprietor of the store, took advantage of the other gunman and kicked the gun from his hand.

Immediately the other victims pounced on the robbers. For a few seconds the pharmacy was turned into a roughhouse with the robbers getting the worst of it. When police arrived they found the bandits bound and gagged. The gunmen were taken to a hospital for first aid and later to central police station.

Anderson, Forest's forward, scored 19 of the 30 points for the locals and also made the winning basket.

Marry-Go-Round

BY HELEN ROWLAND

Sweet, Sweet Home! With a Dash of Tobasco

LOVE is such a simple thing; yet it is almost as hard to find in this artificial modern life as a plain uncamouflaged boiled potato in a smart hotel.

• • •

There are only two vital causes for the failure of any marriage. One is the husband—the other is the wife.

• • •

Why do so many girls make the mistake of trying to run a man down when it is so much easier and simpler just to trip him up?

• • •

For discouraging the unwelcome kisses of a self-elected Lothario nothing has ever yet been found quite so effective as a well-placed yawn.

• • •

Mother's cooking is always identified in a man's mind with a hearty young appetite; and doubtless, the young husbands of the next generation will go right on bragging of the wonders that dear old mother could perform with a can opener and a bottle of mayonnaise.

• • •

Many a girl marries a man because he is a "tower of strength"—only to discover that he is a leaning tower.

• • •

Two thoughts cannot occupy the same man's mind at the same time—unless they happen to be a blonde and a brunette.

• • •

Men may not be so mercenary as women—but lots of them marry for "moral support."

• • •

Funny how full the world is, these days, of "separated" women who are in a state of suspended divorce—neither wife, widow nor free lance. Apparently with marriage, as with an ankle, a sprain is more painful than a break.

SPORTS
Here 'n There

BY KARL R McELROY

IN 1929 Marion County was represented at the district basketball tournament by two teams. The number will be cut to one this season following the announcement by St. Mary's that it has been unable to get reinstated in the Ohio High School Athletic association.

Instead St. Mary's is endeavoring to obtain an invitation to the national Catholic tournament in Chicago March 19 to 22. The tournament is sponsored by Loyola university. Records of the local quintet have been sent to the Chicago school. If the Saints are acceptable to the tournament officials it will be announced within the next several weeks.

Nine of the Catholic high schools in the state will be barred from the state race tourneys as a result of a ruling by the athletic association. Coaches of all schools in the association must be members of the school faculty and should have not less than three class room periods each day. The smaller parochial schools are unable to comply with this ruling. That is the case with St. Mary's.

* * *

Charles T. Ulrich who will manage the Mar-O-Del golf course in Marion when it is opened next spring attended the annual meeting of the National Greens' Keepers' association in Louisville, Ky., this week. He is getting plans together for the opening of the local course.

PRESS accommodations in the North Central Ohio High School league are far from being ideal. That holds true for both basketball and football.

During the football season writers were compelled to work in the open without chairs and tables. Often it was necessary to sit with players of either of the two teams. When the rains came writers refuse to work and copy paper becomes a mass of wilted soaked pulp.

Newspapermen are crowded into the smallest possible space during basketball games. A table usually measuring three by four is the ordinary accommodation offered at all the cage games. Working at the table are four high school officials — the scorers and timers — and what up to writers who can find a vacant corner.

One step providing for the convenience of writers was taken last year when season passes to all league games were issued. The tickets eliminated the usual argument with the ticket takers on the subject of free admission.

It seems to me that league officials could take action at their annual meeting this spring to provide better facilities for the working press at all N. C. O. games.

MARION UNABLE TO MAKE SHOTS COUNT; 3RD LEAGUE DEFEAT

Harding Will Play Tough Zanesville Quint on Star Court Tonight

BY EARL R. McELROY
Sports Editor, The Star

ANOTHER basketball game went into the red column for the Harding High team when Ashland with a ball perched at the peak marked up its first North Central conference league victory of the season. When the last dead ball was tallied the score of 17 to 13 had cut down the many lead of the visitors to a few of the more entrancing and humorously called court scores.

Neither team recorded any basket unusual in the way of basketball although the game at times reached proportions bordering upon excitement. Good old Dad the Muse was evenly matched. In Ashland time it marked the end of a nine game losing streak while to the few Harding followers it was more like—Oh, a headache on a blue day.

For once this season F. Pershyde wrote his name in bright letters on the scoring sheet. Although not the class of the league he was the best in last night's game. The star Ashland forward counted nine of his team's 17 points. Mathews scored two buckets for the victors.

Harding held the lead but once and that was for but a moment in the third quarter when Kling made a free throw after Welty was caught blocking. A short time late Ruzzo shoved Thomas and the latter looped a free throw to knot the count at 11 all. A shrinkside shot by Ashland placed Ashland two points to the good and Merkel knotted the count at 13 on the third period ended.

The time out turns about going scoreless. At the end of the last quarter the score read 9 to 5. Ashland failed to tally in the second while Harding was marking up two on Merkel's basket. Both teams hit the rim in the third frame with Harding getting a little the best of it. Then the final period Hutchinson's offense folded up like an umbrella while Ashland scored a basket and two free throws to win the game.

Harding had plenty of chances to scrap up the game in every period.

Ashland one defense offered no great problem but the locals just weren't living right. They came close but a close miss counts no more than a shot into the audience.

Tonight the Presidents will attempt to stage a comeback in Star auditorium when they tie Zanesville Harding fares a far more formidable opponent tonight than the one that defeated it last night.

In the preliminary the Marion Y. M. C. A. quint will play the Columbus Y. M. C. A. boys. The first game is scheduled for 7:15 o'clock.

Large Increase Shown in 1929 Library Circulation

Annual Report Lists Figure 24,372 Above That of 1928: Per Capita Cost of Operation Nearly Two-Thirds Less Than National Standard

Last year at City library there was an increase in circulation of 24,372 books over 1928 and of 57,991 over the year 1925, the first year the library became a school district library. This is announced in the annual report, made public today, which showed the circulation for the year as 107,263 books.

The per capita cost was nearly two-thirds less than the standard set by the American Library Association. Locally, the amount was 33 cents per capita. The national association has fixed a dollar per capita as a minimum allowance for adequate library service to the community.

Additions for Year

One thousand, eight hundred and eighty-seven books were added to the library shelves during the year, making a total number of books accessioned at 22,877. There were 1,696 books added by purchase, and 98 books given the library from friends.

The report show that there are 85 periodicals and newspapers currently received at the library. Of this number, 72 are subscribed for, six periodicals donated, four newspapers subscribed for and one newspaper donated.

Among the activities of the library is the Vacation Reading club, which celebrated its second anniversary last summer, with a membership of over 20 girls and boys of the city. Two lists, one for younger boys and girls and one for older boys and girls, were compiled by the librarian and her assistants.

Award Made

A worthwhile book was awarded to the member reading the greatest number of books chosen from these lists. There was an increase of 361 subscribers over the same period in 1928.

National Book Week was celebrated at the library, with lists and suggestions for men, women and children. The reference department of the library is one of great importance to the city, and is visited daily by people who have to do research work.

CLASS MEETS

CAREY, Feb. 8—The Dorcas Bible Class of the Methodist Sunday school held its regular monthly social Thursday night with Mrs. E. C. Harshberger, Mrs. Edward Gibbs, Mrs. Charles Hunter and Mrs. J. A. Kimmel were assisting hostesses. The time was spent socially and with games and contests. Refreshments were served.

Perfection in Diamonds

There cannot be anything "just as good" as perfection because, in this world, there exists only one state of purity and one standard of perfection in diamonds. All attempts to qualify perfection are but mere words. The transcendence of perfection has no need for qualification. "Perfect Blue-white Diamond" is all-sufficient, and every gem in our stock is so guaranteed. Nothing can be better—nothing else "just as good," everything else must be inferior.

DECISION IN MOON CASE IS REVERSED

Court of Appeals Gives Claim of Loan Company Priority Over Bank's Account

A decision handed down by the third district court of appeals in a court case which involved the Home Building, Savings & Loan Co., and the Commercial bank as cross-petitioners in the receivership suit brought against Edward S. Moon by the Standard Oil Co., reverses the Marion county common pleas court.

The action decided by the district court was brought by the Home Building, Savings & Loan Co. to have a lien against part of the Moon property given priority over the claim of the Commercial bank. The common pleas court ruled in favor of the Commercial bank. The decision of the appellate court, however, favors the building and loan company.

Attorney Hayes Thompson represents the loan company. The bank is represented by Attorney George T. Geran.

PET DOG KILLED AS CAR SKIDS OFF ROAD

"Skippy" Hit by Flying Glass While Riding in Marion Auto Near Carey

Resting contentedly on an auto seat beside his youthful mistress, Skippy, a wire haired terrier, yesterday afternoon was caught in a shower of flying glass and fatally injured. Three occupants of the car escaped without serious injury.

Margaret Stofer, 5, of 324 South State st., and Skippy were occupying the rear seat of a Chevrolet coach driven by Mrs. H. K. Stofer when the car skidded from the road a short distance north of Carey yesterday afternoon, as the family was returning from Fostoria.

A glass was shattered when the side of the car struck a telephone pole, and a flying piece struck Skippy in the throat. The dog bled to death before he could be moved from the seat of the car.

Although bruised and covered with glass in the accident, Mr. and Mrs. Stofer and Margaret were little worse for the accident today. The car was able to continue under its own power.

Skippy's body was brought to Marion and laid in a small grave behind the Stofer garage.

WET, DRY LEADERS DEBATE PROHIBITION

Audience of 3,000 Hears Congressman and Senator Argue in Cleveland

CLEVELAND, Feb. 8.—Cards of strength for the forthcoming congressional liquor war in Washington were laid face up on the table today following a debate here last night between Congressman Fiorello H. LaGuardia, of New York, and Senator Smith W. Brookhart, of Iowa, champions of bitterly opposed sides, on the question, "Can Prohibition Be Enforced?"

An audience of 3,000 which was decidedly wet in sentiment, hissed and heckled Senator Brookhart, the arid Iowan, and cheered and applauded La Guardia, the militant and outspoken critic of prohibition, as the two gave each other a memorable tongue lashing. The audience cast its lot with the New Yorker, nearly three to one.

La Guardia based his main argument on statements that the liquor law is a violation of the bill of rights; that it would take millions of dollars to enforce it; that drunkenness has increased since prohibition; that the coast guard is contaminated and corrupted as a result of the law, and that murder is rampant.

Brookhart attacked Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon as the man "responsible for rotten prohibition enforcement," and affirmed his conviction that the liquor laws can be enforced "with an army and the right men to lead it."

Taft Reported Showing Great Improvement Today

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—Former President William Howard Taft has progressed so far from the immediately critical stage of the illness which forced his sudden resignation as chief justice that his physicians today were considering the discontinuance of the twice-daily bulletins on his condition.

When, on Tuesday, he was carried from a southern train, it was feared he could not live for more than a few days. Since getting back to his own home, however, and being for the first time in years without the worries of official duties, Taft has continued to improve.

INDIAN RECORDED AS SCHOOL BENEFACTOR

Burial Place of George Wright Is Historic Spot in Green Camp Township

north of Green Camp, was reserved for his grave, with the stipulation that the plot be kept up and also that it be enclosed in a low iron fence and a to a high one.

Flag on Grave

The grave is located near the center of a large field, a short distance from the road. The place is the scene of a pilgrimage made each Decoration day by the children of the Green Camp schools, who place flowers on the mound in memory of their patron. An American flag waves over the grave, which is marked with a headstone and also a stone at the foot. Time and the elements have made some of the inscription on the headstone and practically all the markings on the footstone illegible.

The story of George Wright, while it still is one known by practically every resident of the village and vicinity, has become almost a legend, as no authentic history has been preserved. All agree that Wright belonged to the Wyandot Indians and that when the tribe left the vicinity for the plains of Upper Sandusky, he stayed on, secured his farm from the government, built himself a log house and became a good neighbor and friend. Some of the older citizens of the vicinity recall hearing of the merry times enjoyed by their grandparents under the roof of the Wright dwelling.

Wright's wife, according to some, was a colored woman, and when the Indians took their departure, she deserted her husband and fireside to go with them. Later, according to reports, she was one of the number who burned Colonel Crawford to the stake. Wright's two children, a boy and a girl, accompanied their mother, and were never heard from, according to the story. Wright lived his life alone, and aside from keeping up his farm, became an expert silversmith.

At the time of Wright's death his farm, known later as the old J. T. Johnson farm, was located in Pleasant township.

PENNINGTON HELD IN IRONTON TRIAL

Officials There Refuse To Give Up Man Wanted Here on Auto Theft Charge

Charles Pennington may not be prosecuted here on a charge of stealing an automobile owned by John Wiedemann, city police prosecutor, Sheriff John J. Francis failed to bring Pennington back from Ironton yesterday.

Pennington has been bound over to the Lawrence county grand jury on a non-support charge filed by his wife. For the reason Ironton officials refused to turn the man over to Sheriff Francis. If Pennington is prosecuted here on the automobile theft charge it will probably not be until after the non-support charge has been disposed of in Lawrence county.

The belief that two men were involved in the theft of the Wiedemann car proved a myth yesterday when Sheriff Francis arrived at Ironton to bring them back to Marion. The "Lance Severns" reported to have been with Pennington in the theft turned out to be Blanche Sherman, Sheriff Francis stated today. The Severns-Sherman misunderstanding apparently resulted from poor telephone connections when local officers were informed by Ironton police of Pennington's arrest.

Ironton police learned of the stolen car when Mrs. Pennington, who filed the non-support charge, told them that Blanche Sherman was driving a car Pennington had stolen in Marion. The woman is in Ironton under $500 bond as a witness in the non-support case.

Wiedemann brought his car back to Marion yesterday.

BRAZIL IS UNEASY AFTER SHOOTING

Undercurrent Felt in Political Circles; Vice President To Recover

RIO DE JANEIRO, Feb. 8.—With the presidential elections less than a month away, an undercurrent of uneasiness was felt in Brazilian political circles today following the shooting of Vice President Fernando Mello-Vianna while making a political speech at Montes Claros, Minas Geraes.

Three bullets from the gun of a supposed political opponent entered the neck and head of Dr. Mello-Vianna. Five other persons, including the vice president's private secretary, were killed and 14 were wounded in the melee that followed, according to dispatches received here today.

The vice president was removed to a hospital in Belio Horizonte, capital of Minas Geraes. It was stated his wounds were not critical and that he would recover although it could not be stated definitely how soon he could essay the journey back to this city, more than 400 miles away.

So long as fat people have reached 60 and still have their health why should they worry about reducing?

Between 25 and 30 Head Due at Fairgrounds Within Few Days

Marion racing fans will have something to work up their enthusiasm when the last wintry blasts inform that spring is near.

Between 25 and 30 head of race horses are to arrive at the county fairground stables within the next few days, according to C. W. McDonnal, fairground caretaker. The horses will be at the fairground stables during the spring training season and some of them will probably remain there during the greater part of the summer.

Horses are to be brought to the stables here from Bucyrus, Upper Sandusky, Ashley and Marion. Miles L. "Tuk" Anderson will have a stable of seven head. Perry Rout, of Ashley, will have eight head.

One of the best-known horses to be housed at the fairgrounds will be Peter Chas, a horse that attracted considerable attention as a four-year-old last season. The horse is owned by James Hinaman, of Marion. Hinaman will have three horses here.

In addition to the harness horses about 15 saddle horses will be kept at the fairground during the coming riding season. "Doc" Martin and Ernest Grenger will have their stables at the fairground.

Lip Readers Prefer Silent Films to Talk

SAN ANTONIO, Texas.—S[illegible] ancient prejudicess may have been removed with the coming of talking pictures, but there remains a group of persons who prefer the silent films to those with sound.

They are the lip-readers. And their prejudice is voiced by Miss Eu[illegible] Parker, who conducts a lip-reading school here for hard of hearing persons.

Formerly, deaf persons could enjoy the movies because every line was spelled out. Now, however, with actors and actresses desiring to show their profiles to an admiring public or even turning the head away from the camera, a great deal of the action is lost on those who cannot hear, because the lips cannot be seen clearly enough to make them readable.

However, those growing proficient in the art of lip-reading are able to follow a great deal of what takes place on the screen, according to Miss Parker.

Poverty is the best teacher, though there are incorrigible pupils in the school, too.

STOLEN CAR REPAIR BILL REACHES $118

Escapade of W. Va. Youths Proves Costly for Machine Owner

C. O. Foster, Beckley, W. Va., was in Marion today awaiting repairs on his Chevrolet coupe, which was wrecked by two Pettus, W. Va., youths more than a week ago when they struck a culvert at Newman's bridge, south of Marion.

The car was damaged to the extent of $118, and will be repaired by Monday, according to Foster, who will remain here and drive the car to his home.

According to information furnished by Foster, the car, a 1928 model Chevrolet coupe, was taken from Beckley, 50 miles from Pettus, about 2 o'clock in the afternoon. That evening, the boys attended prayer meeting in Pettus, and apparently left for Ohio after the meeting.

Jimmie Acord, 18, one of the youths, was injured in the accident south of here, and is now at City hospital. He will be returned to his home when he has recovered.

Woodrow Cook, 17, blamed for the stealing of the car, and who stole another car in this city after the accident for his return flight to Portsmouth, is in Mansfield reformatory, where he was sent by local officials for auto stealing. At Portsmouth, he wrecked the car which he stole here.

"Sunny Side Up" Booked for Showing at Palace Next Week; Ross Players Enter Their Forty-Fourth Week at Grand; Other Theater News

ONE of the outstanding events on next week's theater program will be the picture that has probably had the greatest success of the past year, "Sunny Side Up." It will be shown at the Palace Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

The Palace has "Hot for Paris," with Victor McLaglen and the funny El Brendel, Sunday and Monday.

Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell in "Sunny Side Up"

REGARDED as one of the most unusual musical shows of the season, "Sunny Side Up" at the Palace Tuesday, features Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell, supported by Sharon Lynn, El Brendel, Frank Richardson and Marjorie White. The picture was directed by David Butler.

It brings the songs that the radio has been whirring into homes—"I'm a Dreamer, Aren't We All?" "You Find the Time, I'll Find the Place," "You've Got Me Pickin' Petals Off of Daisies," "Sunny Side Up," "Turnon the Heat," "If I Had a Talking Picture of You."

The story, what is known as an original, tells about the romance of an East Side girl in New York who falls in love with a wealthy youth while endeavoring to make his other girl jealous so that she will marry him.

The picture has broken all sorts of theatre records, running, for example, in Cincinnati for six weeks.

El Brendel, who is in the cast of "Sunny Side Up" is featured in "Hot for Paris." His old partner from "The Cock-Eyed World," Victor McLaglen, is co-starred with him, while prominent in their support is Fifi Dorsay who played with Will Rogers in "They Had to See Paris."

The story is about a first mate who holds the winning ticket on a horse race that brings him 200,000 pounds. When the jockey seeks him out the first mate believes he is after him for some foraitture he broke up on a previous visit to Havre. He and his pal beat it for Paris to make whoopee. Polly Moran and George Fawcett also are in the cast.

Elliott Nugent Is Star of "So This Is College"

ELLIOTT NUGENT, featured here a couple of years ago in "The Poor Nut" on the Grand stage, is the star of "So This Is College" at the Marion Sunday to Tuesday. Robert Montgomery, Cliff Edwards, Polly Moran and Sally Starr are others in the cast.

This is another original screen story and the chief motive is the contradory of the two star football players on the U. S. C. team. The campus vamp, wrecking their friendship, almost ruins their game against Stanford.

They suddenly realize what is happening and then the climax occurs.

The football scenes were taken when 100,000 cheering fans were in the stands.

Charlotte Greenwood, she of the long legs and the comedy get-up, is featured in "So Long Letty" at the Marion Wednesday. Miss Greenwood was long a stage star and this movie once served as a musical comedy for her.

In the cast with her are Grant Withers, Bert Roach, Claude Gillingwater, Patsy Ruth Miller and Helen Foster. In addition to some songs popular in the stage version, new numbers have been added.

Myrtyl Ross Players in Their 44th Week Here

A RECORD is being set every day by the Myrtyl Ross Players at the Grand.

Who would think that a stock company would remain in Marion for 44 weeks? But, this is the record of the Grand company. The Players enter their forty-fourth week Monday night.

And for next week they will present a mystery play, a detective feature, "The Studio Murder," a play that is not to be confused with "The Studio Murder Mystery," the Players declare.

Tonight and Sunday mark the close of "The Fighting Parson."

When the Ross Players came here more than a year ago theater patrons anticipated an engagement of a month or two months at the most. No one dreamed they would remain this long. But they continue on and on, now a part of Marion.

Variety's Miniature Reviews Presented Here

"THE Home Song" (M-G). Film debut of Lawrence Tibbett, opera name, in a good looking all-color picture. Slow unto dullness outside of Tibbett's singing, but with that voice compensating the difficiencies. Much too long but Tibbett's songs, and the production will carry it for one week.

"Son of the Gods" (FN). Barthelmess picture holds class and interest plus a great performance by Constance Bennett. Story a bit weak but picture okay anywhere.

"Lost Zeppelin" (Tiff). Quality and costly production with theme of contemporary interest. Well done and despite lack of plot incident holds interest.

"Men Without Women" (Fox). Stunning, realistic picture that will talk.

"Street of Chance" (Par). Smart exploitation can cinch this one. Strongly hints of recent murder of well known gambler. Excellently done and has William Powell's name to help.

"Love Comes Along" (Radio). Meritorius programmer starring Bebe Daniels. Well made, ably cast, and with a good theme song.

"New York Night" (U. A). Norma Talmadge in her first the main point. Good performance by the star in a fair picture. Underworld and backstage combination yarn along familiar lines.

"Bishop Murder Case" (M-G). Philo Vance murder mystery. Tuned to all box offices.

"Little Johnny Jones" (FN). Race track yarn of familiar formula but done nicely.

"The Grand Parade" (Pathe). Backstage minstrel story well produced, directed and treated. Music the kind they'll whistle.

"Parade of the West" (Universal). Poor western talker. In an 8:7 dialog picture.

"On the Border" (WB). Hackneyed story for Rin-Tin-Tin talker.

"O'Malley Rides Alone" (Syndicate). Silent and too timid in story to rate importantly.

"Love at First Sight" (Chesterfield). Backstage film below par except for dancers and a band. Casting is not good.

"A Fragment of An Empire (Amkino). Good direction, Camera angles, and fair acting in a little different story.

Wesleyan Players To Do "East Lynne"

DELAWARE'S half-century old opera house will be rededicated as Ohio Wesleyan university's "little theater" when the Wesleyan players present a revival of that 19th century melodrama favorite, "East Lynne," Feb. 13-14-15.

The opera house which is housed on the second floor of this city's city hall has been completely remodeled during recent months after having been closed for many years. "East Lynne" will be the first production in this remade playhouse.

The old melodrama was selected by the Wesleyan players for the opening production because it was felt that this play would be especially appropriate in that it would bring again into the theater the atmosphere of the gay 90's when Delaware's city opera house enjoyed its heyday. "East Lynne" was a favorite at the local playhouse during the 90's, and accordingly the revival of the play is to be costumed in the dress of that day.

Rudolph Bednar, Cleveland, will be the villain who still pursued her, in the part of Sir Francis Levison, playing opposite to Sidney Stone, Delaware, in the role of Archibald Carlyle. Feminine leads will be played by Isabelle Krehbiel, Dayton, as Barbara Hare, and Kathryn Kunkel, Lakewood, as Lady Isabel.

The remodeled playhouse has been made one of the finest and best equipped community theaters in the United States. Its facilities include seven dressing rooms, well heated, ventilated, and lighted, and furnished with dressing tables and other equipment. Rest rooms and shower baths are also included in the equipment. A feature will be a luxuriously furnished lounging salon to be used by the cast and stage crew during performances.

Women players will be especially pleased with a full length mirror which will stand at the foot of the stairs leading from the dressing rooms to the stage thus enabling the co-ed actresses to take one last check up on costume and makeup before facing the footlights.

The stage in Ohio Wesleyan's little theater will be 25 feet deep and 32 feet wide. Ample storage space for scenery and costumes, and large work rooms for use by classes in scenery designing have also been included in the theater's layout.

The city opera house had been in disuse for years needing a complete renovation and addition of stairways and fire escapes necessary to make it comply with the state fire code for theaters. Students of the theater have hailed it as a typical example of the nineteenth century American theater. This atmosphere is being carefully preserved in the process of renovation, the same original designs being carefully used in the repainting of the theater's decorations.

Malice is a mean sounding word that exactly describes what it means.

A man's mind sometimes runs to the contrary; a woman's always does.

SCOUT CAMP SHAPED UP FOR NEXT SEASON

Cleanup Work Done as Time for Spring Opening Draws Near

With the time for the spring opening of Boy Scout Camp John A. Owens rapidly drawing near, scout officials have taken steps to shape the camp for the dozens of outings it will entertain during the spring and summer months.

Aided by workmen sent to camp by the Community Fund, Court Minter C. Brown has cleared the camp of all brush and fallen limbs and has rearranged it for a new plan of scouting this year.

Lodges at the camp have been divided into two groups, which will separate the younger and older boys. Scout headquarters have been built into the front of the workshop, and a new and larger kitchen has been built.

In addition to this work, 14 cords of wood have been salvaged out of the fallen brush and trees, and the camp has been subjected to a general cleanup, Chief Brown reports.

A Converted Antagonist

A SERMONETTE

BY THE REV. W. C. GRAVES
Evangelist, Calvary Evangelical Church

THERE was perhaps never a more amazed audience than that one which heard Saul of Tarsus preach his first sermon in Damascus. Saul was known far and near as a hater of Jesus Christ and a persecutor of Christians. He had come to Damascus for the express purpose of laying waste the church, arresting all believers in Jesus Christ, and dragging them to Jerusalem for punishment and death.

There is not on earth today so bitter an antagonist as Saul of Tarsus; and yet the same Saul of Tarsus preaches a sermon of tremendous power, declaring and proving that Jesus is the son of God.

What changed him? He says it was because as he drew near to Damascus, at the noon hour, suddenly there shone around him a great light from heaven, above the light of the meridian sun, and then in that light he saw the face and form of Jesus, and that he heard a voice say unto him, "Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?" and that when he asked who it was speaking the voice replied, "I am Jesus of Nazareth whom thou persecutest."

Did he lie? Notice what it cost him. It cost him everything of a worldly character. It cost him position; influence; the loss of all his old friends; it cost him persecution, arrest, imprisonment, scourging, stoning, attempted assassination, wandering, hunger, nakedness and dangers of indescribable magnitude.

When a man of standing and education like Saul of Tarsus makes sacrifices like that for a change of opinion, his new opinion must demand great consideration.

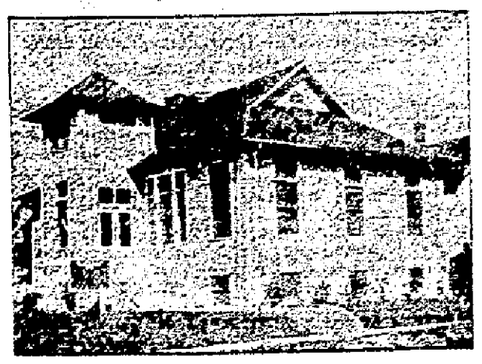
Building Remodeling Planned as Next Step in Progress of Church of Brethren



Pictured above is the place of worship of the First Church of the Brethren at East Church st. and Reed av. At the right is a photograph of the pastor, the Rev. G. G. Caufield.

BY HALLIE HOUCK
Marion Star Staff Writer

BIRTHDAYS mean a great deal in the life of a person or in the life of an institution, and the proper growth is expected in either case or something is wrong.

The First Church of the Brethren, East Church st. and Reed av., started in a small way.

With no place to worship, and with but few to worship, the few of the denomination met July 7, 1912 in the Christian church edifice, North Main st., and held the first service under the name Church of the Brethren.

Transferred to Home

That night, worship was continued in the home of one of the members, Elmer Tice, Neil av. For about a year services were held in this home and at another place at Center st. and Franconia av. Later, property at 135 Reed av. was purchased by the Mission Board of the Northwest Ohio conference to be used as a meeting house until other arrangements could be made possible.

This property was used for about five years, and then became inadequate for the growing congregation. On Feb. 24, 1918, the present church was dedicated for worship. The church was erected by the same Mission Board, and loaned to the worshippers here.

Changed to Parsonage

The place before used as a meeting house became the parsonage and has been occupied since by men placed in the field by the Mission board, with the cooperation of the local church.

Although the present church building is not adequate for the present Sunday school program, the cooperation of the workers is making it possible to continue the work. The membership is looking forward to the time when it will be justified in remodeling and enlarging the present church building.

The personage will be included in the remodeling plans, and to make this possible, the church has been engaged for many months in raising money in various ways and placing it into a building fund with which to do the necessary remodeling.

Generous Aid Given

Various individuals and organizations within the denomination have contributed liberally toward this fund. The public, too, is given credit in adding to this fund, for at each of the suppers or entertainments there has been a splendid patronage from the friends of the church.

The Rev. G. G. Caufield is the present pastor of the church.

Daily Proverb—"Where the hedge is lowest, the devil leaps over."

When an Evanston, Illinois, policeman gave a girl a ticket last June for parking too long, she told him that she would get even with him if it took the rest of her life, and she evidently meant it. Anyway, she married him Thursday.

Prohibition Commissioner Doran, in exonerating Colonel John F. J. Herbert, prohibition administrator in the Idaho-Montana district recently attacked by Senator Borah, announced that the charges of misconduct made against the colonel were in part due to malice and irresponsibility. Can it be that the commissioner would impute either to the distinguished Idahoan?

A man out in Pasadena, California, looking over a telephone directory, discovered that a brother he had not seen or heard from in thirty-one years was a fellow-resident of that city. There are a lot of queer quirks in this old life of ours.

Internal revenue figures show that 119,038,841,560 cigarets were sold in the United States last year, an increase of 13,000,000,000 over the year before. If anything like such a gain holds good for a few years more, we will be almost justified in assuming that cigaret smoking is becoming a national habit.

A young man, who was given permission to practice on a church organ up in Park Falls, Wisconsin, is under arrest for stealing $2,500 worth of fox and other skins which he found hidden away in the instrument, and the pastor of the church is charged with possession of skins of animals caught out of season. Our sins find us out even if it takes peculiar kinks of fate to turn the trick.

Congressman Charles Brand, of Urbana, has just purchased a 245-acre farm in Champaign county, the tenth owned by him, making him the largest farm owner in the Seventh congressional district. In the face of the years of complaint regarding the farm situation, we take it that Mr. Brand is one of the exceptional men who know how to get value out of farm land by knowing how to farm.

A cavalry chief has been named by the president to make Washington a model dry city. If all stories from the national capital are true, he will need more than horse marines to turn the trick. He will come pretty near having to employ submarines.

The New York state commissioner of correction blames the Auburn prison riots on the lax administration and the influence of politicians and welfare organizations, and warns that more riots will follow if congoes, the big end of our crime is due to lax ditions are not corrected. As far as that administration and the influence of politicians and welfare organizations, the first of the evils usually resulting from the combined effects of the other two.

They'll Do Well To Consider.

Immediately following the attempt to assassinate President Rubio, of Mexico, the crime was attributed to political differences down there, the belief being that the would-be assassin was the tool of the opposition, although he insisted at the time that he had been moved to his act by purely personal reasons, to which insistence he still holds.

Friday's advices from Mexico City, however, throw a new light upon the crime, reporting an admission on the part of the would-be slayer that he was allied with the communists' so-called cause, which has developed a very general belief in the Mexican capital that the shooting was the result of Senor Rubio's initiative in the rupture of diplomatic relations between Mexico and soviet Russia, Mexican newspapers stressing the fact that the home of the young man held for the crime is in Charces, state of San Louis Potosi, which is a hotbed of communism.

If it is demonstrated that the attempt upon the life of the newly-inaugurated executive was the result of a conspiracy and in retaliation for his previous advocacy of the recalling of the Mexican representative in Moscow, it is going to prove very embarrassing, if they are capable of experiencing embarrassment, to those Americans who have been advocating recognition of the soviet government by the United States.

Coming so close upon the heels of cables to the effect that the papers of Paris are openly charging that the leader of the exiled Russians in France, who disappeared, last week while strolling along a street in Paris, was kidnapped and murdered by agents of the soviet Russian embassy in Paris, this Mexican crime should cause those who have been active in championing the recognition of Russia to pause and think a bit. Until such charges, openly made, have been demonstrated without foundation in fact, they will do well to refrain from too much enthusiasm over their great friendship for Russia under bolshevik rule.

A Lot To Be Said for Spanking.

What to us was a very interesting story came over the wires, one day this week, from Indianapolis. It told of the spanking of two schoolgirls out there by two deputy sheriffs.

The girls, accosted by two strange men in an automobile, agreed to accompany the two men to a lunch-room, and entered the car. After partaking of sandwiches and coffee, the four reentered the car, but instead of taking the girls home as the girls hoid they understood they would, the two men started out into the country. As the car approached a farmhouse, the girls jumped out and ran to the house, seeking protection. Two deputy sheriffs were notified, and soon were on the scene. After getting the stories of the girls and those of the members of the household, the two deputies gave the schoolgirls some good advice and then turned them over their knees and spanked them.

This action of the deputies was, of course, utterly without the law. It may arouse the ire of the girls' relatives, and may result in the indictment of the two deputies for assault and battery. Whatever the outcome of this phase of the incident may be, there can be no question but what spankings were just what the two girls needed.

Spankings are just what a lot of youngsters need. They would have a beneficial result on many of the children of today. It is a matter for regret that spankings could not have been administered to the 200 youngsters who staged a demonstration in New York City, some days ago, which later turned into a miniature riot.

It may be said also that spankings would have proved the proper medicine for what was ailing the two score of youngsters, a week or two ago, who broke up a meeting of the Cleveland city council by entering the council chamber and drowning out its proceedings by yelling: "We want free car fares," and keeping it up until the last of them was ejected. Spankings would cause such youngsters to pause before again becoming the tools of their elders, who in this case used them to make trouble, relying on the youth of the youngsters to protect them from punishment.

We do not mean that children such as were used in the New York and Cleveland cases should receive such punishment as to hurt them to any considerable degree physically. That would not be where the benefit would accrue. The real punishment would be that they would "lose face," as the Chinese put it, among their companions, just as criminals, who have been legally flogged, lose face in the criminal world, a far greater punishment to them and one that endures far longer than the physical suffering which is theirs as a result of the lashings received. It is a generally recognized fact that criminals will endure almost any punishment legally inflicted in preference to the cat-o'-nine-tails, and many reformed criminals have held this "losing of face" harder to endure than the lashings.

It is an open question if spanking in many cases would not prove more beneficial as a means of overcoming youthful folly or waywardness than commitments to reform institutions which seldom work reforms, and often do far more harm than good. There is a lot to be said for the corrective influence of spanking.

The department of commerce announces that seventy-eight of the larger cities of the land have reported 655 fatalities caused by motor cars during the four-week period ended January 25 against 612 fatalities from the same cause in the same cities during the four-week period ended January 26 of the present year. The situation manifestly is going from bad to worse.

Dr. Henry Neumann, of Brooklyn, says that Mussolini could clean up Chicago in short order. Possibly so, had he a considerable element of the public with him as he did in Italy, an element willing to do more than talk. But even so, wouldn't the case be another in which the remedy would be worse than the disease?

Billie Riley has sued Joe May, vaudeville headliner, for $100,000 for breach-of-promise, alleging that she found in his pocket a picture of Peggy Joyce marked: "Love—Peewee." Pshaw, Billie! Don't get huffy over a little thing like that. Peggy possibly was out of picture postcards the day she sent it.

The girls of one dormitory at Bethel college in Newton, Kansas, are advertising in the college paper, calling the attention of the college men to the attractions it offers. Without regard to "what's the matter with Kansas," it's a cinch it isn't lack of initiative on the part of her co-eds.

An American woman was arrested over in Budapest for wearing in a theater a Paris gown which showed what the authorities considered too much bare back. There would have to be a regular building orgy if all women over here were jailed on a charge like that.

A Detroit barber who has served five years of a twelve-and-a-half-to-fifteen-year sentence in the Marquette prison on a conviction of participation in an $8,000 pay-roll robbery, has been vindicated of having had any connection whatever with the robbery. What possible recompense can be offered for the five years taken out of a man's life like that?

Another plane crashed into the roof of a house this week, the accident occurring at East Hemsted, New York, and causing the death of the pilot, who waited too long to use his parachute. Just another reminder of the need of legislation giving property-owners protection in case of property or life loss resulting from plane crashes.

Pacific coast farmers have complained to the United States bureau of agricultural economics in California that the manner in which jazz programs break into market news programs is a source of great irritation. It's just possible that the way some of the voices of speakers of the agricultural department break into jazz programs may be a bit annoying to jazz lovers, provided, of course, that there really are any such.

'JUST LIKE A PARENT'

Mind and Body To Coordinate.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

Accidents caused by automobiles are increasing rapidly. You have only to enter a hospital to find the large number who are there recovering from some automobile casualty. Every newspaper has the sad stories of accidents, accidents from many causes.

One authority tells us that there are twice as many children of school age killed in accidents as die of any one disease. This is really appalling! What can be done to lessen this harvest of life and limb?

We see "Safety-First" signs everywhere. They are put up by the health authorities in every great city. They are seen in street cars, subways and in buses. The Red Cross and the state do much in this line. Attempts are made to educate the people so that they will exercise every care to avoid accidents.

St. Louis has introduced into its schools a system of safety education for boys and girls. The result has been that seventy-five per cent. of the usual number of accidents to children have been prevented. Every city should follow this noble example.

According to the National Safety council, there are thirty-four non-fatal accidents to every fatal one. We are glad it isn't worse, but this means that out of thirty-four accidents many victims will be crippled in some way or other, and some of them permanently.

In stormy, slippery weather, there are numerous accidents. People go, with lowered heads, maybe under umbrellas. They dash around in front of street cars and automobiles, without stopping to make sure of safe passage.

On the street, in the store, in the factory, or right at home any one of us is liable to have an accident. When one is over-tired, or absent-minded, it is very easy to make a misstep or to do the thing which wouldn't be done if the mind were alert to every move.

Some persons seem to stumble more easily than others. How can we develop our power of co-ordination? It is well that children when they are young have gymnastic exercises, some form of games or dancing, some form of exercise that will train body and brain, to work together. What we call "poise" of the body is developed in this manner.

These things influence the good health of the child. Perhaps fewer accidents would happen if all could be taught poise, alertness and the importance of what we call "safety first."

ANSWERS TO HEALTH QUERIES

M. K. B. Q—What is the cause of excessive perspiration under the arms?

Q—What is the remedy for excessive salivation?

A—Usually due to a nerve disturbance. Try using hot water compresses under the arms for half an hour daily to check the symptom. Improve the health and the nerves will benefit.

Q—Since the trouble is usually due to some gastro-intestinal disorder, correct the diet first of all. Also be sure to keep the intestinal tract clear.

MRS. J. F. C. Q—Is dandruff contagious?

A—While not exactly contagious, care should be exercised. Never use another's brush or comb. Keep the hair and scalp immaculately clean by careful shampooing and rinsing, and use a good hair tonic occasionally.

Editorial Comment.

WONDERS OF EASTER ISLAND.

The expedition to the South Pacific of Eldridge R. Johnson, of Moorestown, New Jersey, on a steam yacht, now building, to cost $1,500,000 will pay special attention to the mysteries of Easter island. They have baffled the archaeologists, who still wonder how the stone houses, semi-pyramidal cairns, towers, cisterns and statues were built in a long-past age, who were the builders and what became of them. The relics are often grotesque, whether they have been cast down or still stand almost impervious to sea fogs and storm.

Mr. Johnson will take will him a large party of scientists, and whether they discover anything new or not, they will have a memorable cruise among Pacific isles under sumptuous conditions of quarters and fare. One purpose of the enterprise will be to find an island "not yet looted." It may be doubted whether most of the islands have ever been worth spoliation. Many are reefs and atolls, where only sea-birds and lizards could find a subsistence. The souvenir hunter has, of course, been busy on Easter island, but there is still a wealth of curious material left.

H. J. Braunholtz, assistant keeper of ceramics and ethnography of the British museum, has come to some interesting conclusions about Easter island remains and those who designed and constructed them. He says that the statues were cut from the volcano ash of Rano-Raraku, a mountain at the northeast end of the island. Stone chisels were used. Some of the heaviest pieces weighed fifty tons, and the means of moving them about has never been explained. The forty-eight houses in the "village" of Orongo are unlike anything known elsewhere in Polynesia. Ancestors of the present inhabitants—now numbering 250—built them. The date of the earliest settler's arrival he makes in the fourteenth century. The exact meaning of symbols engraved on tablets is probably lost beyond recovery. The door is left open to Mr. Johnson's scientific guests.—New York Times.

TOO MUCH REGULATION.

Many times during recent years Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler has made statements that did not receive unanimous support of men and women, but he made one at the recent alumni gathering of Columbia university that merits the cordial support of all thinking people. He rebuked the passion in evidence in this country to regulate by law anything and everything. He longed for the day when legislative bodies will give their attention to questions of importance to the public, and refuse to follow sensation lovers who want to regulate the individual and community.

He made a pointed reference to the action of congress during recent years. If prices in the stock market went higher some one clamored for an investigation and a new law regarding the activity. If they went down, the same thing was proposed. Apparently some members of congress assume they were elected to regulate individual conduct and business activities, and rush in fields where they are entirely unacquainted and grab hold without thought or information. It never seems to occur to the minds of some congressmen that such things, really, are none of their business, so Dr. Butler observes, and could be left alone with no danger to the public.

Too many laws and more coming, too much regulation and more in sight. The craze for regulatory legislation deserves the sharp rebuke Dr. Butler gave.—Ohio State Journal.

MR. HUGHES' EXACT TITLE.

Those who enjoy having and imparting precise information, noted with satisfaction that Mr. Hughes' official nomination paper, when dispatched to the senate, phrased his office as "chief justice of the United States." This will not prevent millions of citizens from referring to him as "chief justice of the supreme court," for his function amounts to that. In fact, the first seven chief justices were so commissioned. But since, the present designation has been official.

From the beginning of our government, however, the court has never been officially known as "The United States Supreme Court," which many still call it. The exact title is "The Supreme Court of the United States," although the constitution referred to the tribunal when creating it as simply "one supreme court." The more formal appellation is followed to such an extent that in telegraphers' code the court's name is ticked off as "Scotus"—a combination of all the first letters in its designation.

While the act of creation mentions the head of the court as "chief justice," it specifies his colleagues as "judges." In general polite parlance this has been changed to "justices," and it is considered proper to introduce an associate judge as "Mr. Justice So-and-So."—New York Times.

Marconi.

BY ARCHIBALD HENDERSON.

Twenty-eight years ago, a twenty-seven year old Italian scientist, confident and alert, sat at a little table in an old barracks on Signal hill, near St. John's, Newfoundland. The sensitive receiving instrument, representing years of research by the young scientist, was very crude as compared with present-day radio apparatus. At his disposal were no vacuum tubes, amplifiers, super-heterodyne sets. At the sending end, Poldhu, Cornwall, were no directional transmitters. The message, the letter S, was sent, not in short waves along a beam, but merely roaming out in space.

The huge kite, swaying 400 feet aloft in a blustery wind, miraculously picked it up. To Marconi at his desk, the sound was unmistakable; three little clicks, faint, but distinct.

The impossible had been accomplished. A wireless message sent through space with the speed of light and cross the Atlantic ocean, and registered there a sound "heard round the world." It was one of the great moments of history.

Ever since he was a lad, Guglielmo Marconi had been experimenting with electricity. Born at Villa Griffone, near Bologna, on April 25, 1874, he had been dedicated to music by his father; but science found in him one of her most sedulous votaries.

At first, he experimented at home; afterwards he studied under Professor Rosa at Leghorn. The chief stimulus to electrical interests came to him from Professor Augusto Righi at the University of Bologna, who had been active in experimenting along lines first laid down by Heinrich Hertz. Many investigators had worked on the problem of wireless transmission, beginning with the famous American, Professor Joseph Henry, more than half a century before Marconi began his work. Samuel B. F. Morse, Professor John Trowbridge, of Harvard, and even Edison himself made contributions towards the solution of the great problem. Messages had been sent a number of times, for short distances, by various experimenters—Bell, Dolbear, Loomis, Kitsee and Preece. On the basis of the work of Varley and Calzecci-Onesti, Professor Edouard Branly, of the Catholic university, of Paris, invented the famous "coherer," which laid the foundations of Marconi's success. Marconi assembled the various devices which had remained chiefly scientific toys in the hands of his predecessors, and coordinated them into a workable system of communication. For this great achievement, he will always hold the honor of being the inventor of the wireless telegraph.

Since his first spectacular success, Marconi has not been content to rest on his laurels. It is due to him in great measure that wireless is installed on all important vessels, resulting in inestimable benefit to humanity in the saving of human lives. After six years of experimentation, he invented the system of short-wave transmission by means of the directive beam. This highly-efficient system, which employs a parabolic reflector, is rapidly displacing the system now in use. Marconi has made many other inventions, notably the radio lighthouse, enabling the navigator to locate his position at sea, the automatic S O S receiver, the magnetic detector, and the horizontal directional aerial.

Marconi is the oracle of wireless. He is given to prophecy, which almost always finds fulfilment. He foresees in the future a world run by wireless—commercial television and the wireless transmission of power.—Copyright, 1930, International Features Service, Inc.

Along Broadway are a number of fencing schools which quickly train those who have been assigned to bold-knight roles on the stage or in the movies. The lessons are from five dollars to $10 and one of the best-known teachers is Louis Senac who has made a comfortable fortune in his calling.

In the past few years fencing has been taken up by a number of capitalists, as a relaxation and aid to reducing. A well-known lady novelist is adept at foils. The oldest club is in Washington square and it attracts a sizable list of devotees regularly.

Where did we get the idea that the teacher of the preacher was a bad boy? Study "Who's Who in America" and learn that the sons of preachers lead all the rest in numbers of those who have attained places of distinction in the world. And now comes Dr. C. "Only one out of ten men at sixty-five has enough money to assure him an income of even $50 a month.

"Only one out of three men who are healthy at thirty, dies before he reaches sixty," he said. "The burden of support of the old usually falls on the children. This is terrible philosophy. Each generation should take care of itself."

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Myers, above, parents of George Turney Myers, 309 Willow st., will celebrate their golden wedding anniversary Wednesday, Feb. 12, at their home, five miles south of Marion on the Delaware pk.

Mrs. Myers will be 81 years old on March 5. She was the daughter of John D. and Harriet Scofield Turney, pioneers of Franklin county. Mr. Myers, who will celebrate his eighty-eighth birthday anniversary on Feb. 28, is the son of John and Mary Worline Myers, pioneers in the history of Virginia.

It is unusual that he is now living within two miles of his birthplace. Mr. and Mrs. Myers were married Feb. 12, 1880, in this city, by the Rev. Mr. Guard, of Delaware. Their entire married life has been spent on the farm where they are now living.

Mrs. Myers is a member of Lydia Chapter No. 81 Order of Eastern Star, and is one of the most active members of the Pleasant Township Farm club. Years ago she was a teacher in the county school. Both Mr. and Mrs. Myers belong to Epworth M. E. church.

In honor of their golden wedding anniversary celebration, Mr. and Mrs. Myers will give an afternoon and night reception at their home, for all their friends and relatives. A family dinner will be served at 6 o'clock.

The Record for POPULARITY —held by Goodyear Tires

THE single record that, in our opinion, really counts with careful tire-buyers is the popularity record which Goodyear has held for fifteen years: "More people ride on Goodyear Tires than on any other kind."

It simply says that an overwhelming percentage of your fellow-motorists get the most value and every-day satisfaction out of Goodyear Tires.

The reason, of course, is that Goodyear builds more than ¼ of all tires sold in America, enjoys lowest costs, can give greater values.

May we analyze your needs and recommend the most satisfactory type of Goodyear Tires and Tubes for you? You will also appreciate our courteous, efficient service. If you prefer, we will call at your home or office.

And added to the thrill of this new performance is the splendid pride appeal of new and larger bodies—richly upholstered—jewelry-fine interior fittings executed by Cartier et Cie. Thus today, more than ever, a Chrysler inspires a pride of ownership all its own.

Just Things

—BY EDNA S. DUTTON

Advertising

THERE are divers ways of advertising business opportunities, ways of attracting the attention of a prospective customer, but about the slickest stunt this writer has heard of was the tactics of an employe of a well known shoeshining parlor who sat in one of the chairs where he could get a good view of approaching foot traffic, and just as the victim was about to pass the place, drop a sign bearing the word "shine" literally in his or her face. The sign, which was operated by a string, usually brought a grin of recognition, if not a customer.

Testing Merchandise

WE most all agree that the merchant gets his full measure when he makes a sale but on a second thought, he has his tough breaks, too. Who is going to get the merchandise that you, me and a dozen others have inspected and didn't purchase? My attention was called recently to the would-be purchaser of table linen. She rubbed it between her hands to ascertain its quality and then put up the old test of wetting it with the end of her finger to see whether or not it was linen. Just about that time the camel's back, which in this instance was the clerk's patience, broke, and the customer was forced to take the latter's word for the merits of the linen.

• • •

Salesmanship

SALESMANSHIP is an art and the salesman on the job sells when the opportunity presents itself. A window decorator placing some attractive looking spring frocks on display, recently, lost no time in counting off on his fingers the price of one of them when an interested woman on the outside wigwagged a query as to the price.

Why, the man had [illegible] of his own old tricks on [illegible] favorite argument of Jimmie's [illegible] that the stupid criminal always [illegible] his crime first and dis[illegible] himself afterward, thus in[illegible] his chances of being taken, [illegible] clever criminal disguised [illegible] for his crime and afterward [illegible] himself once more, leaving the [illegible] looking for a nonexistent man [illegible] to disguise. Why, he saw [illegible] the whole of the Coin de [illegible] was a disguise—and a proper [illegible] one at that—bought up, lock, [illegible] and barrel, by No. 1, to cover [illegible] headquarters of a most dangerous [illegible] And he, Rezaire, had been [illegible] like any schoolboy. How Neas[illegible] must have laughed to himself [illegible] Jimmie kept asking who No. 1 [illegible] and not a moment later spoke in[illegible] of "the proprietor!"

No. 1—Viloff—was talking in Eng[illegible]sh, and now his voice was [illegible] metallic, like his dark black [illegible]

Governess Acknowledged

"I have a score to settle with you, [illegible] Rezaire. You have caused me [illegible] trouble. You have landed two [illegible] men in prison, you have put [illegible] to great expense—in fact, I'm not [illegible] you haven't driven me out of [illegible]. How you have done this, [illegible] more or less alone, I cannot [illegible]stand." Jimmie cast his eyes [illegible] for the other should read in [illegible] the knowledge that he had [illegible] as a confederate. "It shows [illegible] though you have done foolish [illegible] you must be really clever, be[illegible]cause I myself am no child. Of [illegible]course," continued Viloff thoughtfully, "you may have an accomplice in Shrewsbury Mansions, but I hadn't time to ascertain. Anyway, Shrewsbury Mansions are not in Paris. Really, I ought to have solved your game before, I suppose. I should have put you quietly out of the way when you were in our power, but I confess your extremely quick change from convict to—or—detective misled me. Fate thinking you were just a criminal with no sense of loyalty toward his employer."

Still Jimmie did not speak; there was nothing to say. The other's half cold, half-friendly way of talking had at first given him hope.

Now it began to fill him with an apprehension, which at the next words kindled to his previous panic once again.

"Well, it is getting late. I think you had better say your prayers; because I don't imagine you will see tomorrow. You had better say them to this," he chuckled, and taking the Murchison sighter from the drawer, he placed it on a chair in front of Jimmie.

"An ingenious toy. I wish I could have understood it and it would have saved all this bother. However, our friends in Russia will make light of it, won't they?" he added, turning to Siminski, who, sitting on a settee talking in low tones to Zita, merely grunted in answer.

"What are you going to do with me?" asked Jimmie with dry lips.

The other answered as if he were discussing a visit to a theater.

"Kill you, of course. There are many ways. Which would you prefer? I don't mind obliging you if it can be managed, because you have made me laugh once or twice—particularly with the little note you sent me last night by my taxi-driver."

Jimmie suddenly strained at his bonds in an access of terror and Viloff laughed easily and naturally.

"What! No preference? You leave it to me? Well, I'll fix it. Will you tell me the number of your room; for I presume you are staying in this hotel under a false name? You see I must just arrange your things there for the little drama I have in mind. Dear me! To think that in a few days' time the body of yet another unknown Englishman will be fished out of the poor old Seine. Poking his nose where it wasn't wanted, they will say. And they'll be right."

Blindly Jimmie told him the number, and Viloff passed out of sight behind his head to the door. Jimmie heard him interrupt Siminski's muttered conversation to say calmly:

"Keep an eye on him, and if he tries to shout, just choke him a bit."

He heard Siminski's careless assent, and the gentle closing of the door.

Hyslop on Time Again

It was about 10 minutes later that the door opened again. Jimmie heard Zita begin: "Have you fixed * * *" on then break off with a little cry of fear. Simultaneously he heard an exclamation of rage from Siminski and then, with an infinite gratitude, a well-known voice.

"Frightfully sorry to interrupt and that all don't you know."

Again Hyslop had come to his aid.

"What do you want?" began the Russian and his words were thick, either with drink or fear.

"Careful, old lore," came Hyslop's cheerful tones. "Don't move suddenly like that. I'm not frightfully good at guns and things, and this one might go shooting-fire and you'd be pop-bang-dead. Just unleash my old school-chum on the floor, will you, there's a good chap, while I watch this reliever."

Jimmie, freed by the cursing Siminski, stood up and rubbed his stiff limbs. Hyslop, with a revolver in one hand and a light mackintosh over the other, was standing by the door.

"What do you imagine you're doing?" asked Zita scornfully. "And who are you?"

"Ah, you don't remember me. And it was I who made a disgustin' exhibition of myself in a public place in front of you."

Zita could do nothing but preserve an angry silence. Then Jimmie saw her eyes fall to a bag on the table beside her. He slipped out a hand just before here, and threw the bag with the little revolver it contained to the top of the wardrobe.

"Clever!" sneered the girl with cold fury in her voice. "But just you wait. * * *"

"I will. But don't look so hopeful, either of you," put in Hyslop as Jimmie moved to his side by the door. "Because there's not an earthly chance of your other little playmate coming in suddenly behind me. He's lying bottom up—pardon the vulgarity—on a bed wrapped round and round with all the jolly old sheets in the room. And * * *"

The Escape

Siminski, who had been till then standing with his hands raised in the center of the room under the electric light, swaying unsteadily, suddenly made an upward grab at the globe. There sounded a small crash and the room was in darkness. Instantly there was a smart scuffle. Some one caught Jimmie's leg; but he kicked out viciously, all the concentrated energy of the last five hours in his foot, and the hold fell away. He heard Zita give a sudden short cry of pain, and muttered, "Serve her right for mixing in this!" as he made for the door. He was barely outside, before Hyslop also darted swiftly carouse, still with his revolver and the mackintosh over his arm and looking as cool as ever. Jimmie slammed and locked the door, as hands caught at it on the far side.

"Quick! Away!" muttered Hyslop. "Before they rouse the place!"

They sped downstairs, passing a scared chambermaid, and out into the street. Not till they had rounded three corners and were safe in a taxi did they speak.

Then Jimmie said breathlessly:

"Well, H. H., I can't thank you enough. But how the merry hell did you get there. That sort of lucky arrival usually only happens in cheap detective novels."

"Just thought you might want little Henry's help," returned the young man airily. "You got my messages?"

"Yes. Many thanks. Nearden's pulled in, I gather?"

"He is, but what the artful old devil had with him was a bit of machinery faked up to look like the Murchison. It wasn't spotted till 1 o'clock—or we might have done something at Dover. Clever devils! Moment I heard that, I caught the afternoon boat, arrived here at 9 and went to the Ritzillon, where I got a message from a Monsieur Jules at the Hotel Metz. That gave me the clue to your whereabouts."

"My God—what a fluke! I very nearly didn't bother to phone. I thought I had the whole game in my hands."

"H'm! That was luck. Well, I tottered out to your hotel, engaged a room by way of precaution, found yours, and sat there waiting for my friend Monsieur Jules. When you hadn't turned up by a quarter past 10 I got a bit worried, and so luckily I was just nicely ready when that bird hopped in on me. He was surprised. From him, after an argument which left him all tied up, I gathered you'd been copped. So I nipped off to find you and did some rough stuff on my own. * * * Who was the chappie, by the way? He seemed a pleasant-spoken bloke."

To the Montmartre

"The fellow you tied up," said Jimmie with a grin, "was No. 1. * * *"

"Gosh!" cried Hyslop. "And I never even pushed his face in. * * *"

"Alias Viloff, alias Monsier Villon!"

"Well, I'm all shattered," murmured Hyslop and lay back silent against the taxi cushions.

"So was I."

"Look here, where are we going?"

"Small hotel I know in Montmartre," replied Jimmie. "We'll walk the last part, to put any one off the scent. There's no train now tonight. * * * Good Lord!" he broke off in the utmost dismay, and buried his face in his hands.

"What's up?"

"The Murchison sighter! We're failed after all! We—never took it in the excitement. After all this * * *"

"Steady, old boy!" Hyslop pulled aside the mackintosh still hanging over his arm and displayed the metal framework bulging in a large pocket. "Here it is! I saw it sitting in a chair and swooped it in the dark."

Love's Reawakening

The Story of a Wife's Triumph Over Jealousy

BY ADELE GARRISON

Revealed as the Sender of the Mysterious Express Package

"TWO thousand dollars".

The words in Harry Underwood's voice seemed to scream across the side hall where he stood beside the side hall where he stood taking Lillian and me with the big wooden box in the Catskills lying between us. I was thankful that neither Lillian nor I had echoed them aloud, although I knew that her brain was reeling with them as mine was. I was in the foolish hope effort to postpone what I now knew was inevitable.

"There's probably a mistake. Mrs. Cosgrove probably meant twenty dollars and the express agent got it mixed."

Harry Underwood laughed shortly.

"Considering that $20 is probably the high-water mark for a shipment from that office in as many years," he drawled, "I am afraid that very interesting theory won't hold water. Besides this receipt slip contains other details which I should have given before, only your little chat concerning the everyones was so entertaining, I simply didn't have the heart to interrupt it. But—well—suppose you look at the thing yourself."

He thrust the piece of paper toward us, and I took it before Lillian could raise her hand. There was that in Harry Underwood's eyes, something primitive, feral, which made me feel that I must shield Lillian as far as lay within me from whatever the arrival of this box involved.

The receipt was stamped with the word "Fragile" and I realized now that the box bore the same label. But it was the name of the shipper which held my eyes fascinated.

Robert Savarin!

It was the name I had feared, yet half expected to see. Robert Savarin, the famous artist, lost to the world through insanity, and hidden in the Catskill mountain home of his faithful sister, Mrs. Cosgrove, for fifteen years, and then mercifully restored to sanity, home and fortune again.

Lillian's Old Romance

His restoration had brought him more than all these. It had brought back Lillian into his life. Lillian whom he had befriended when she was an eager young student and to whom he had given her first drawing lessons. He had gone away to Paris, and out of Lillian's life, ignorant of the wild adoration, the first love of a romantic girl, which Lillian never-to-be had given him. His marriage, his subsequent unhappiness, ending in a broken mind, his disappearance from the artistic world—these had been known only vaguely to my friend because of the troubles which had come into her own life after that brief, girlish adoration of Robert Savarin had become only a fragrant memory.

Her marriage with Tom Morton, Marion's father, had been a tragedy because of the man's utter rascality and the success of his dovetail scheme to keep her child from her, and compelling her to divorce him. Utterly lonely she and Harry Underwood—"another derelict" he had dubbed himself—had joined their lives in a comfortable, comradely marital past which held no touch of romance, and had been fairly content in the "Broadway atmosphere," which had been theirs when I first met them directly after my marriage to Dicky, their best friend.

Looking Back

Then Tom Morton had died, clearing Lillian's name in a deathbed confession, and restoring her little daughter to her. Lillian's instant determination to cast aside the make-up and the dyed hair which Harry Underwood had insisted upon her using because they made her look youthful had been the beginning of the rift between the husband and wife. Then had come Harry Underwood's inexplicable plunge into debauchery and that mad culminating drunken act of treason which had nearly cost Dicky's life on the aviation field during our preparations for the World war.

Then for nearly ten years Harry Underwood had been, first a fugitive, then, because of his bravery under an assumed name in the war, an unofficial detector of plots against constituted government. He had shown no desire even to see Lillian, and it was during this interval that Robert Savarin, his name on every lip in the artistic world, found her again, and fell in love with her as violently as if he were a callow schoolboy.

It had been a wonderful wooing, that of the famous artist, and I had watched with mingled hopes and forebodings how but sure capitulation to it, aided greatly. I knew, by Marion's outspoken affection for her "Uncle Robert" and her demand that her mother make him her "really truly" father. Only Dicky had staunchly insisted that Harry Underwood, despite his sins, was more Lillian's mate than a "doddering ancient," as he persisted in dubbing the famous artist.

Only I knew how near Lillian had been to acceding to Robert Savarin's urging that she quietly divorce Harry Underwood and marry him, and I only knew the reason for the sudden departure of the artist for Europe. It was because she had discovered that the artist, apparently the soul of gentleness, was a Turk at heart, who was jealous of her work, of every man she met in a professional way, and who, she clearly discerned, would demand that even her idolized daughter, Marion, should hold a place in her heart second to his.

Jubilee's Pardner

A Story of Humorous Boyhood Adventure

By JUDD MORTIMER LEWIS

SATURDAY and bright and fair. I Jubilee down by his rope and took care of my stoves and milked and strained the milk and fed my face and cleaned out the stable, but I had a hard time doing it. I thought I would tie the dummed brutes outside whilst I cleaned it and then I would turn the boss in it and do it right. So I took the long horn rope and tied it around the old cow's horns and took hold of the end of it and led her out and when she found out she wasn't tied to the manger she went crazy and stuck her tail up in the air and kicked toardst our house and then toardst the house next door and then toardst the barn and then lit out for the gate and jerked me off my feet and if there had not of been a big knot on the end of the rope I would of lost her when I slid through the gate on my stummick. Everyone was hollering and my mother was in the kitchen door screaming, and just when the cow got through the gate Jubilee got ahead of her and barked at her and made a jump at her nose and she put down her head for a second and stopped. Then she jumped forward to start for the pasture and Jubilee dodged out of the way, but by that time I had scrambled up and wound the rope twice around our tree, and when she got to the end of the rope with her head down and going like a train she stopped so sudden that she done a flop and came down on her side so hard that it made her ribs rattle. Then she got up facing toardst me and looking foolish and I unwound the rope and led her into the barn and tied her. My mother came out to see that she was tied, and she axed me how I ever thought to wind the rope around the tree. I told her I didn't think, I just done it. Then when we went in the house my mother said she hoped the cow wasn't hurt, and I axed her if I hadn't better let her smell of my aunt's camphor, and my aunt thought I was making fun of her. Women aren't so very brite.

We went over to the stink factory then and they were putting fertilizer in bags to put on a train and three of the men had went finey, so we all got jobs shovelling it into bags and weighing it and tieing the bags shut and we worked all day and got half a dollar a piece. But when I got home they wouldn't let me eat in the house. My mother fixed me a plate and I had to eat my supper on the back step, and then I had to go upstairs and throw my clothes down and wash all over whilst my mother soaked my clothes and washed them. I don't know what is the matter with grown-ups, they don't want a fella to make any money. I will be glad when I am growed up, if ever.
